MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE CONVICT SHIP. Morn on the waters, and purple and bright, Bursts on the billows the flashing of light; O'er the glad waves like a child of the Sun-See the tall vessel goes gallantly on; Full to the breeze she unbosoms her sail, And her pennon streams onward like hope in the gale;

The winds come around her like murmuring song, And the surges rejoice as they bear her along-See! she looks up to the golden edged clouds, And the sailor sings gaily aloft in the shrouds— Onward she glides, amid ripple and spray, O'er the waters, away, and away! Bright as the visions of youth ere they part, Passing away like a dream of the heart! Who as the beautiful pageant sweeps by, Music around her and sunshine on high, Pauses to think amid glitter and glow, Oh! there be hearts that are breaking below Night on the waters ! and the moon is high, Flung like gem on the brow of the sky; Treading its depths in the power of her might, And turning the clouds as they pass into light. Look to the waters! asleep on their breast Seems not the ship like an island of rest!

plain, Who, as she smiles in the silvery light, Spreading her wings on the bosom of night, Alone on the deep as the moon in the sky A phantom of beauty-could deem with a sigh, That so levely a thing is the mansion of sin. And souls that are smitten, lie bursting within? Who as he watches her silently gliding, Remembers that wave after wave is dividing, Bosoms that sorrow and guilt could not sever, Hearts that are broken and parted forever; Or dream that he watches affoat on the main The death bed of hope, or the young spirit's grave? 'Tis thus with our life, while it passes along, All gladness and glory to wondering eyes, Yet chartered by serrow and freighted by sighs-Fading and false is the aspect it wears, And the withering thoughts which the world can-

Like heart broken exiles, lie burning below ; While the vessel drives on to that desolate shore, When the dreams of our childhood are vanished and o'er ! [The above lines have been found in an old manuscript. The transcriber would be pleased, in addition to the favor of publishing them, to be told, who is the author.]

JAPANESE ARTISTS .- A letter writer from Washington, speaking of the taste of the Japanese in the matter of the fine arts, and of their skill with the pencil, says: Their principal artist, Yorsida Sagosagemon, is a very clever sketcher of detail, but his portraits have a tea-caddy look, and his and every pane of glass in every window. He uses paper made from the fine bark of the mulberry-paper tree (morus papyrifera) by boiling it in lye, stiffening it with rich starch, and pressing it. Their ink is made from the shells of a nut shaped like an almixed with water and gum, after which it is

Dutch manufacture. The fine arts are not highly esteemed in Japan, as painters and carvers are not even entitled to wear one sword, and are ranked with pedlars and barbers, nearly at the botthe ornamental painting, and one of the assistant censors has some fine specimens of his wife's handiwork. Her own portrait represents a hatchet-faced feminine, destitute of eye
